

Inglesby And Sons Honors Veterans At The Tomb Of The Unknown Soldier

Inglesby and Sons Funeral Home had the honor of placing a memorial wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery. The wreath was dedicated in honor of those they have served here in New Jersey.

“We were both humbled and grateful to have the opportunity to participate in honoring our fallen war heroes,” says David Hernandez, Jr., owner of Inglesby and Sons Funeral Home and principal of Jersey Memorial Group. “Our caring team of professionals has seen firsthand the sacrifice many of these men and women have made in serving their country, and it is our privilege to show them the respect they so richly deserve.”

Inglesby and Sons Funeral Home is part of the Jersey Memorial Group, which owns several funeral homes throughout the state including Oceanside Memorial Home, Lake Como; Old Bridge Funeral Home, Old Bridge; and Waitt Funeral Home, Morganville. Jersey Memorial Group is family-owned and operated by the Hernandez family and offers state-of-the-art facilities, products and services to families saying a final farewell to their loved one.

“Participating in this event at Arlington National Cemetery was in line with our family’s philosophy that life is full of opportunities to show people we cherish them,” notes Hernandez. “One such opportunity is in honoring their memory.”

David L Hernandez Jr. and Ronald T. Principe Jr. of Jersey Memorial Group have the honor of placing a memorial wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery. Hernandez is also owner of Inglesby and Sons Funeral Home in Pennsauken.
